Abstract

This article speaks about the Romanian Orthodox theologian Teodor M. Popescu and about his activity as a preacher. Even if he was not a priest, as a Professor he had the opportunity and capability to write many sermons with different topics. Our study presents some biographical elements and a list with the most important publications. Being aware of his conception that the Christian religion constitutes the central role of the whole world, we criticize the structure of his sermons, his style and his speech. Also, having in mind the moment when he wrote, we mention what sources he used. At the end, we make some conclusive remarks about this impressive Romanian theologian and professor.
