Abstract

From an Orthodox Christian perspective, the religious phenomenology can contribute to improve the missionary activity of the Church by presenting the human phenomena as act of manifestation and communication of the divine in the world. According to the phenomenologist philosophers, consciousness represents the place where God and man meet. The Church notes that this encounter is recorded as a saturated phenomenon in the person of the Savior Jesus Christ. From this reason, the Orthodox missiology attaches particular importance to the philosophical trend of studying the religious phenomenon.
