

Conflicting Values in Youth Education

PhD Lecturer EMILIA-MARIA SORESCU, University of Craiova, emsoreescu@gmail.com

Abstract

The socialization of the young generations is achieved at the confluence of many educational influences from family, school and social environment in its broadest meaning: community, Church, media, virtual environment, national and global society, each based on some options value.

This study analyzes the role of the values in the education of youth from social-constructivist perspective, highlighting the special features of this aspect in the era of virtual communication and globalization, conflicting values that interferes with the educational process and the importance of religious education in this process.